EMIL NEY HAS TO PAY

Still Supporting the Republican Party.

JUDGE'S ADVICE TO YOUNG WIFE

"Barefooted Bill" Bobs Up Again.
Hooky Players Tell Just Why They Did It.

Emil Ney paid another $2 and costs into the Territorial coffers yesterday on the old sweet charge. When arrested the convivial ex-bailiff was disseminating the principles of the Republican party along the cocktail route. Ney, who claims to be a descendant of the great Marshal of France, pleaded guilty, but favored Judge Wilcox with a few minutes' conversation, in the course of which he stated that he was not a strict teetotaler.

"Et is not all my fault, may it please your honor," said Ney, "ze gendarmes zey hound me and ze newspapers horrible zey seek at all times to make of me ze grand ridiculousness. I am not what you call him, ze vulgar nuisance, and at every times I can perfectly able to take care of myself. Ze big brown gendarme when he take me up, he give to me ze big kick, mon Dieu! but zat is not ze prepare respectfulness to show to ze bailiff of ze Circus Court."

Several times Judge Wilcox attempted to apply the closure, but it was no use, the garrulous little Frenchman had to be allowed to run down.

"I am ze citizen of the American States," concluded Monsieur Ney, "and in ze great America if ze man takes too much of ze vin, ze gendarmes treat him as if ze loved him. Zey do not take him up until he makes of himself ze uncommon nuisance."

The arresting officer testified that he found defendant about 11:30 last night embracing a telephone pole on Nuuanu street.

William Hoopli, alias "Barefooted Bill," the well known and popular Kaakako burglar, faced the music on a charge of drunkenness. Two dollars and costs was his portion.

John Waiahao, charged with assault and battery on his wife, was reprimanded and discharged. It appeared that the wife one day went out and left her baby with her mother. Defendant met his wife on the street, and when he got home, according to the girl, gave her a good beating.

Defendant told the court that he loved his wife very much and that she was a lei of pearls to him.

"If that is the case," remarked the court, "she is quite a valuable possession."

"You are married now, Kelliohahikina," said the magistrate, "and must therefore settle down. You have got to quit being a silly, giddy young thing and must stay at home and take care of the baby. I understand your husband objects to your taking dancing and singing lessons. If you have not learned to sing by this time you never will. Your place is at home."

"When the old man comes home, don't nag at him, but try and make things pleasant for him. I won't fine your husband, for if I do, you and your baby will suffer. You must go home and not have any more trouble in the future."

Antone Rosa, charged with truancy, was reprimanded and discharged. He told the judge that the reason why he did not go to school was that he went fishing down at the wharves. Judge Wilcox said that as this was his first offense he would not send him to the Reform School.

"There are a great many better people—better than you—who played hooky and went fishing in their younger days," concluded the magistrate.

Another truant, Ah Foo, was sent to the Reform School for six months. The boy said that he quit going to school because he couldn't get smart fast enough; also, that the curriculum made him tired. The boy's father stated that his son was a confirmed truant, and that he was running with hoodlums and needed restraint. He got it.

J. M. Curtis, a Porto Rican, charged with vagrancy, was given two months in jail. Defendant said that he could not speak either English or native, and that this prevented him from getting work, consequently he had to bum off his friends. Judge Wilcox told him that he would find him a nice, steady job, and sentenced him as above stated. A charge of larceny in the second degree was nolle prossed.

Juan Lugo, another Porto Rican charged with vagrancy, was remanded until today, in order that his claim that he had been working might be investigated.
